

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method detects states that are activated by a computer unit includes: (a) checking a set of values in a memory area of the computer unit or in a proprietary file within stored within the computer unit, with each set of values correspond to a state activated by the computer unit; and (b) capturing each set of values to determine each state activated by the computer unit. Each state corresponds to a particular activity initiated in the computer unit.